

CONTENTS

Chapter I /7

Doctor Witherspoon offers a theory

I engage a manservant

An incident with a burglar

Doctor Witherspoon expounds on common sense, warning signs and Pythagoras

Chapter II /13

A peaceful old house

I do not use proverbs on principle

The peculiar ways of Saturnin

We live on a boat

I agree to recapture Marcus Aurelius

No man can abide doubts about his courage

Chapter III /22

Miss Barbara

I play three losing sets of tennis

Saturnin builds a training wall

An unusual agreement with the owner of the boat

Doctor Witherspoon delivers a speech on the decline of craftsmanship

Chapter IV /32

Aunt Catherine and Bertie

Concerns about the future of Bertie

Recollecting Uncle Francis

Chemical discoveries which the junior classes of secondary schools make from their teaching materials

Family feuds over Grandpa

An unexpected visit, a ban on smoking and other episodes

Chapter V /43

I am made homeless

Further recollections concerning Uncle Francis

Saturnin's war plan

The Devil and St. Nicholas

My aunt leaves and Saturnin brews up black coffee
Smoking is permitted

Chapter VI /52

We go on holiday
Grandpa invites Miss Barbara
A Week in the Life of . . .
Saturnin fails to greet Aunt Catherine
A secret outing by car
Saturnin teaches Grandpa ju-jitsu

Chapter VII /62

They transport me to hospital
Rain, downpour, cloudburst, deluge
Doctor Leveret
The hospital is a trap
The administrator has his regulations
Barbara sorts us out
By pure accident we fail to drown
Doctor Witherspoon

Chapter VIII /73

All hell breaks loose outside
Reflections on the young ladies of today
Bertie in the role of lady-killer
A scandalous bet
Saturnin goes on the warpath against Bertie
Maria the maid and the cook disappear
My aunt wraps Grandpa in a blanket
The bridge is swept away by the flood

Chapter IX /85

An extract from the Koran concerning the cow
Bertie is sent to fetch worms
Miss Barbara cooks our first lunch
The duty to deliver a story at bedtime
My aunt offers Grandpa various delicacies
The return of Bertie

Chapter X /94

I tell my story

A romantic overnight stay

A night visitor

Footprints in the snow

There's someone else living in every house

Mr. Lock leaves and comes back again

Mr. Lock leaves and this time it's for good

An unpleasant dream

Tomorrow it will be Grandpa's turn to tell a story

Chapter XI /101

It is beautiful outside and there is no pain in my ankle

Miss Barbara cannot find a roe deer

Aunt Catherine accuses me of schoolboy pranks

Miss Barbara comes to my defence

This time it's Saturnin's turn to disappear

Bertie is behind bars

No short straws for me

We go mushrooming

It was wonderful

Chapter XII /112

Grandpa is insulted by Aunt Catherine

Dr. Witherspoon delivers a speech ridiculing proverbs

How to conduct oneself at a funeral

A failure to appreciate proverbs

I look at the stars with Miss Barbara

Silence, please

Saturnin again

What really happened

Chapter XIII /122

Someone rings the bell

Alarm on the first floor

I am caught without my umbrella

The sound of gunfire like a parade on Corpus Christi Day

I am attacked

Saturnin lies
Look who's speaking Spanish

Chapter XIV /130

A sweet awakening
We are waiting for a new bridge
My aunt seeks to be reconciled with Grandpa
Concerning the Good Old Days
Recollections of an old trooper
Grandpa and a nobleman in period costume
The grey general
Grandpa forgets to tell his story about the countess

Chapter XV /139

Becoming even closer to Miss Barbara
The enchanted deckchair
Bertie's mishaps
Aunt Catherine hankers after a career as a writer
She proposes a novel about 'Martha, the delicate flower'
Even Bertie could have a literary career
Only one thing matters

Chapter XVI /152

An indiscreet question from Dr. Witherspoon
On novels for women
Courting by numbers
Do not marry a lunatic
Dr. Witherspoon clambers onto an armchair and swears an oath
Supplies are running low
Planning our rescue
Drastic action from Grandpa

Chapter XVII /161

A million people in a line
Bertie doesn't want to tell a story
A bizarre tale from Saturnin
A cognac-drinking ghost
The unseemly behaviour of an oak wardrobe

The chief fire officer and fourteenth century armour
Balthasar Crisp longs for peace
Saturnin in the service of a private detective
We opt to die with dignity

Chapter XVIII /171

Some of the last supplies go missing
Aunt Catherine is being over-sensitive
Saturnin refuses to give an answer
We fail to live up to our responsibilities
Bertie surprises us
Dr. Witherspoon makes a rather confused speech about mental health

Chapter XIX /178

The expedition sets off
Saturnin is our chronicler
Dr. Witherspoon's log cabin
Miss Barbara reads a letter
Prehistoric man and his tree-climbing habits
An unusual hiding-place for a key
Bathing in a tarn is good for your health
What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander

Chapter XX /186

An evening in the mountains
Cool air and cold water
What would happen if I looked into a well through binoculars
Caesar didn't wear a flannel shirt
Grandpa makes a speech with disastrous consequences

Chapter XXI /196

A night in the forest
I am on sentry duty till eleven o'clock
What happened next that night
Bertie surprises me
I ought to have a shave
It rains

*We look like vagabonds
A brief reflection on our adventure
Journey's end*

Chapter XXII /206

*We bask in the fruits of civilisation
My aunt nurses Grandpa
Grandpa goes out of his mind
My aunt would like to see the audacious man who ...
Give the Goddess of Quarrels and Strife some cognac*

Chapter XXIII /218

*Our holiday comes to an end
Miss Barbara thinks for herself
Recalling a man who didn't know how to tell a story
Tomorrow at the National Theatre*

Chapter XXIV /226

*Grandpa's letter
How Aunt Catherine nursed Grandpa
A Holy War on novelists is declared
Grandpa asks a favour, the first in twenty-eight years*

Chapter XXV /231

*Saturnin's letter
"With God at our side, we shall not die of thirst"
A passage from a popular romance
What really happened
Mr. Dale, a game of poker and what it led to Heaven help writers*

Chapter XXVI /241

*I am aware of the fact that a wedding is the only appropriate ending for every tale, and it gives me pleasure that I needn't disappoint my readers in this important regard
A little later in Prague's grandiose Church of St. Ludmila
Aunt Catherine remarried into money*

Afterword /242

